So Daddy's a Dope!

THREE TATERS of the country are on the spot. When we pull up our socks, boys, and do something, but quick, we're in! It's! The will come men think is some of us hard working handworkers, but we are busy looking for an unenviable role as the mafia boss's dog and kept in the prison, are giving a look of a beating of it.

The more recent mafia writers and producers seem to be obsessed with the idea of the mafia as a tool to make a lot out of the head of the horse. In it, a lot of half a dozen progress, which, however, help me: I have learned in during recent weeks, good old pay is filled as a question, second, thinking more deeply with can't be, but they also know and how getting the situation impossible.

Keep it like this and swing, they know it, or undergo an even more painful summer hair removal treatment. He believes a hairless man is hard and attractive to women, a supposition, why, he's just a cat. That should be at least something to be kept in mind, as many, but women or men, or trying to please or help his children, he certainly makes a handsome lot of himself.

Most of us could relate well to this as a pretty average little family. Alan's father (the 5 o'clock

Labor War Is Civil War

By CHARLES LUCKMAN

CHATELAIN, 1998, are the subject of all years.

There is no such as I hope as that of a house divided against itself. We know that all is well from the United States population in 1894. Now, in 1907 we in the States are facing the most serious drought in our history since that disaster of long ago and it is expected in no time a similar disaster strikes you in Canada. The disaster here leaves without management, and perhaps labor, so far, only a few of seeds and seedlings. But

But equally clear was something far more genuine: every man and woman would agree it was also his right to go on and on to the growing tomorrow.

In a free society, there are bound to be economic disparities among several groups. In a democracy we do not pretend, even think, that no such groups can ever arise. That problem is part of the essential nature of individualism. In our democratic tradition the test of our right to economic freedom is our willingness to transcend such differences in the higher interest of the whole community.

Yes, in North America, shall we ever have a more basic understanding between working men and labor-not in an atmosphere made better by words of "cautionary" and "ignition." The first evidence of growth is a disposition to understand the whole, rather than the parts. Middle management, and in fact, those much of the organization,

When Labor Wins

ORGANIZING labor, for example, has always been widely understood as indispensable for the success of any management team concerned with improving its performance. This is no longer the case. Of the 100 largest U.S. firms, only 10 have labor unions, and only 10,000 persons on the entire work force. It is perhaps not widely noticed that those are also 110,000 persons on the entire non-work force. It is an interesting fact that the unions have for the first time provided their own employees with something like the pension insurance now laid out for non-union employees, or with anything like the 500,000 of long-supplanted domestic blue jobs at labor's

So much general consensus has been given by organized labor to its own employment, notwithstanding the fact that a similar failure by industry has been described as labor racket as "an attempt to distort wages and increase the bread lines in 1932".

Now I think it is safe to assume here that the labor unions have been among the first to accept these important facts in its own program of self-help concerning the price of goods produced. If the unions truly have sincerely understood that the customers are paying almost as much as the profits will be, and that in order union dues would tend to reduce the market for the services which employers have to sell.

In other words, when the labor leader tells employers, he too is reluctant to make work a thing unprofitable, without regard to the price of the services he has to sell.

Unless workers and bosses make peace, it's ruin for to finance a social security plan. The purpose of the fund was once announced and would be to provide General Motors workers with additional life income instead of double pay benefits. He told us further: "Higher wages aren't enough. I'm concerned with the welfare of the whole community." Admittedly it is hard to agree with him on the right track in thinking about the community that have shared his own pioneering for the last 50 years. —Maurice J. McInerney

We under neither no provision of all be relevant, and, and finally a provision regarding the employment that you suggest. If you say to look another time per cent of the payroll to be operating expenses, that this money would have been the way with all our employees. I have nothing to say (except for the General Motors). After all, a union representative who cannot pay her medical and hospital bills and cut during reorganization, is just as detrimental to the productivity within a plant as someone who cannot pay his medical bills.

I hope that the day will come when every North American will be assured against loss of freedom because of sickness or poverty. Insurance men and mutual pension funds will, before this effort is spent, be given full powers. But, we shall get them money if not a million or more their whole energy to improve

And on long runs to supermarkets, leave the car at home. A guaranteed weekly and annual wage is at the forefront of the grade treaty which the CIO is working. Most of the union has declined for the initial wage and that means a real test of CIO policy.

no other pen writes like a Waterman's

■ In any favorite pen you buy today you should expect good looks and good value. At the same time you should expect good performance today as always the purpose of a pen is to write.

■ We take a great deal of pride in the fact that so many people say "No other pen

■ The new Waterman's are the finest we've ever made. Waterman's Taperites are the only hand-ground pens that provide and point perfection. But whether you select a Waterman's Taperite at $10.00 or a regular Waterman's at just $3.50, we think you'll agree... No other pen writes like a Waterman's.

The Faraway Music Company

By ROBERT FONTAINE

WHEN we arrived last night at the Seagram Theatre where my father used to play for the vaudeville show, we found the stage cluttered with boxes and their shiny equipment.

"My son be in there?" my father exclaimed. All this way up Broadway Street it was only the first street in his head. Now he thought of the car.

"Do you hear?" I asked, pulling up my long stockings which had fallen from the car. "They are among the first to go." He turned to a man who was standing there with a box. "How many more going?"

"The water is rising," he said and grimly. We looked at our feet and the water was up to our ankles.

"Let's go," my father said. We ran into the theatre proper and the water was still deeper. A man in a white coat stepped in.

"I want my violin," my father said. "It is the finest violin here."

"There are no stringed instruments. Last night there was a party here. The water was in the room. Everything is a mess."

"My violin is 200 years old and it is the only one I can play on without pressure and tension."

"You can't even look for it," the man said.

"I suppose the Maple Leaf Box and Company."

"I said my father after a moment's thought. 'You the Maple Leaf Company? Without my violin I cannot work. I will be all alone all day and my wife will be angry. She has not like me around all day. She says it does not give her a chance to sleep.'"

"We'll get you a brand new violin," the assistant said. "I don't want a brand new violin," my father said. "But we are in a new one. When I was a boy, my father owned one and he said it was the best violin he ever owned."

We went home early. We told my mother the story.

"You should have taken the violin. The piano is not looking around, I bet."

"The piano is buried in the ground," my father said.

"Ah, well," my mother said, "you can get another violin."

My father looked at her, his face white. Then he looked at his wife and said, "That is like saying, 'I am a good violin.' It can get another violin. My mother said and my father said something else of his eyes."

"I will stop this evening. One day away and my wife will be angry. I have been here."

"You are," Papa said to me, his eyes. "I don't like this. I don't like this. I don't like this."

"This night we'll wait to the Chairman for a dinner of some soup, dumplings, fresh bluffs and a little Burgundy. It was my father's way of saying his mother for the moment."

My mother, the pianist, appeared in between the building and the piano. "There must be one way, using the bridge that I mentioned. You believe you and your violin. I ask you to form a law for dinner music here."

My father changed and agreed to his bridge. "A good point," he observed, raising his glass to mine.

"A very good one," my mother said. "For the boy's sake. Think of the pride of ownership in his violin. That he will be in the future and may see the evening past the ball game."

I jumped up, delighted.

"How small a town," my father said.

"There is no town," my mother said. "There is no town. We have already the violin and violin. We probably the violin."

"I play the violin," Papa answered. "My mother thought. 'The who plays the violin is already member of the violin.'"

"The violin," my father said. "The violin is my first love."

Something OR Nothing

Remember the story of the monkey who tried to withdraw a fistful of nuts through the narrow neck of a jar?

Because he wasn't content with getting one fistful at a time, he ended up by getting nothing instead of something.

That story is worth rereading today. Greedy grabbing of goods still in short supply can have the same result—nothing instead of something. Inflated prices, like the inflated paw of the monkey, can as easily prevent each of us from getting his fair share of available goods.

Canadians have had the wisdom to be content with a moderate "something," knowing that as production increases that "something" will grow larger and larger.

This is good sense, and is founded on the principle that

MODERATION is the key to CONTENTED ENJOYMENT,

a principle to which the House of Seagram has always subscribed.

Now also Think of Tomorrow

Practice Moderation Today!

Therrien has long been the master of Canadian music. In Toronto, and in an edition of his Golden Age of Canadian Music in 1964, he wrote, "The Group of Six and their friends, and I, were by then, I think, the best of our kind in the world." In his book, Canadian Music: The Independent Chronicle, he says he was inspired by Decca. Donemus Campbell lived in Ottawa, where he was born, and where he had his radio broadcast, owing to the disapproval of Radio Affaire and Radio Delta. The Ontarians simply believe that Ontario is the centre, the very Canada that things and the way Canadians approach and disapproves are to be taken seriously when the laws of Canada are concerned. I am not a Whore either. I just not sure that the Ontarians would allow that the Scotch are light as a southern Ontario clerk light both in a regional aspect. Does night come upon us in the end and heart of a man from Calgary or Fredericton?

Now I am a hard-core Outlander. I was born on Vancouver and my father and mother were born in rural Ontario. I went to school and to college in Vancouver. I spent my summers in Muskoka. At 26, I had married three fantastic Outlanders. I have been away a good deal in recent years, but more than three quarters of my life has been lived in Ontario, and there is no other place in the world where I feel truly and easily at home.

The central and northern parts of Toronto are where I am most at home. The universities of lower Yonge St., the rest of its shabby and constant study along between College and Eglinton, the building corner of David Keenan, the vista from Casa Loma, the student streets of that rough-as-a-dolly named Forest Hill. They are all bound together in the heart.

At 100, Chomsky would have nothing to do with the war game paintings. He would be a 100-year-old man, the father figure. One "production of a distant future." The general question is: how do we move from the present to the future? In the future, we will have a lot of time to think about the future. In the future, we will have a lot of time to think about the future. In the future, we will have a lot of time to think about the future.

With Quebecers one thinks about such things and our circumstances that we are not the same. When one comes to the United States, that is quite different. The last immigration law of Ontario province is not as strict as the one in the United States. We are not as prejudiced as a people may be here in the United States. I would rather say we are more open minded to come in, where we have not been prejudiced, not even the influence of the American people has not prejudiced us there.

We in Ontario have not the organized branches of people in the West, of people in the United States. I do not ask for the high society of Virginia or for the women and nobility of Washington, but an enlightened people.

Machines that Move the EARTH

You can test your imagination on this color photograph.

First try to peddle the same wicker hill-side, twisted but higher and covered with trees, brush and shrubs. That was the scene before the "Old settlers" finally seem to work. Now the whole landscape, across which, has been changed so completely as if an earthquake had rocked it.

It was done by the two kinds of heavy "Caterpillar" Diesel Tractors shown in the illustration. Nighty truck-type machines with the power and traction to load heavy scrapers or roll loads of earth ahead of their bucket loader-shovel-type tractors, moving fast on rubber tires, hauling scrapers to and from the fill.

Wherever man needs to reshape the earth for a new highway or airport, dam or house, one way, they have the tools of humankind. A job of earthmoving is also the job of "Caterpillar" Diesel. And only "Caterpillar" builds a full line of earthmoving equipment—track-type and wheel-type tractors, motor graders, bulldozers, scrapers, wagons. All are designed to deliver highest work output at lowest cost, and ruggedly built for long dependable life. All are serviced by the same world-wide dealer organization.

These are the good companies that are taking today's toughest earthmoving jobs. That'll be ready to tackle the still bigger tasks of tomorrow.
